Introducing Tulsa Roughnecks

Tulsa Roughnecks 1979 European Tour Party

A RECORD-BREAKING year, both on and off the field, came to a disappointing, but a proud end for the Tulsa Roughnecks when the New York Cosmos defeated Tulsa twice in the recent playoffs. It took one of the Cosmos' finest efforts of the season and 76,031 Giants Stadium fans to eliminate the Roughnecks from the North American Soccer League's "second season" after surprising dual defeats of the division champion Minnesota Kicks and a home win over the Cosmos.

Off the field, the Roughnecks shattered virtually all of their attendance records, drawing 246,383 fans to Skelly for 15 home games and 40,116 for two playoff games, not a bad achievement for the NASL's smallest market. A record crowd of 30,162, the largest non-football crowd ever in the state of Oklahoma, witnessed the Roughneck-Cosmos game on June 13th, and two other crowds

21,114 vs Minnesota and 25,738 vs Dallas were new records at the time.

Last season the Roughnecks set a club record for points, despite winning one less game and finishing one place lower in the NSC Central race than last season. Attack was the key in 1979, with the Roughnecks scoring 61 goals, 12 more than 1978, while allowing 56, 10 more than a year ago. Top scorer with 12 goals was Wayne Hughes.

The Roughnecks and the city of Tulsa, fresh from the playoff excitement, eagerly await the 1980 season, when Tulsa will continue to develop into one of the finest soccer cities in the NASL, and the Roughnecks will renew their quest for a North American Soccer League championship. With two solid seasons under their belts, it is certainly within sight.

A warm welcome to our visitors from Tulsa.
